15 YEARS OF THE WORLD BANK
IN BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA

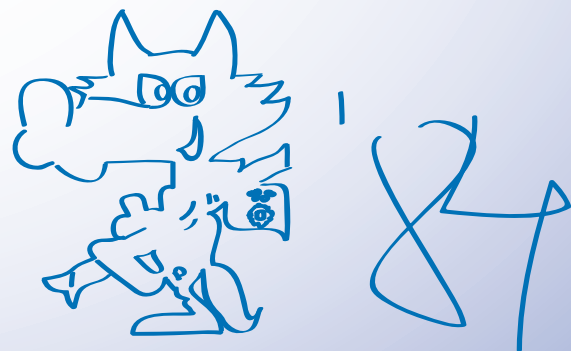

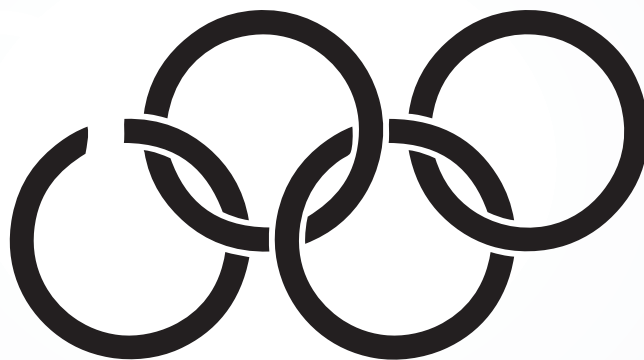

Dear reader,

Join us in celebrating 15 years of successful partnership between Bosnia and Herzegovina (BH) and the World Bank! Over the last 15 years the World Bank has helped improve people's lives in BH by financing 66 projects with a total value of about US$1.6 billion. We are proud of the role the World Bank played during the post-conflict reconstruction period, when our projects helped people get on with their lives, find employment, send their children to school, and access the basic services they were used to before the war.

More recently, our efforts have focused on protecting the country's forests and biodiversity, improving access to health care, improving the business environment, and protecting the most vulnerable. Today, we are aware of the challenges that the country faces on the road to EU membership, and the World Bank looks forward to continuing to partner with BH to address these challenges, and provide support for European aspirations of BH citizens.

Now, the story of the World Bank and Bosnia and Herzegovina actually started more than 15 years ago; in the 1980s when Sarajevo was preparing to host the 1984 Winter Olympics. Didn't know this? Here are a few more facts you may not know about the results of the World Bank in BH.

FROM 1984 WINTER OLYMPICS TO EU Accession...

Did you know that the World Bank supported the construction of the Butile Waste Water Treatment Plant in Sarajevo as part of the preparations for the 1984 Winter Olympics? The plant was severely damaged during the war, and today the World Bank is supporting its reconstruction and modernization.
